

Atlanta's TRMNDS brings an eclectic energy to the speakers every time one presses play. The Georgia standout has done his homework studying the various genres across time allowing him to swerve in and out of lanes as he pleases. TRMNDS is able to bar up and flex his lyrical muscles on one track and then immediately belt out an anthem with his jaw-dropping vocal range the next. With a number of freestyles, live shows and an extensive discography under his belt TRMNDS is looking to take his craft to the next level. Now about seven months after his last project 'A Much Colder Place Part 2: Winter's Peak', TRMNDS returns with 'At Summer's End' a creatively themed EP meant to take us into Autumn and the end of 2022.

'At Summer's End' is a six track project where TRMNDS versatility as a vocalist is showcased. The album teeters on the edge of Summer as we're getting set to fall right into Autumn. Tracks like "Take A Hint" sees TRMNDS presenting the genre-bending talent he has showing his chops as an R&B artist and vocalist. These tracks are then followed up with the emcee side of the Atlanta artist like "Show Out" where he's using a number of cadences and flows to get his point across. "It's a clever way to announce fall as not only the season but also the end of an era of relationships and self awakening," TRMNDS explains. 'At Summer's End' is an adventure through a number of emotions and sets the table perfectly for the last three months of the year.

Tracklisting:
Peace Signs
Take A Hint
Honest
Show Out
The Run Down
Surface

Click Here To Listen To 'At Summer's End'